NATIONAL SERVICE

FARM LABOURERS WANTED

Work for Men, Women and Children

TO reap and save the record harvest of 1917 a large amount of additional labour will be needed in Ireland. Arrangements must be made now. Farm labourers and all persons accustomed to farm work are urged to offer their services at once. They will be enrolled under the National Service Scheme and called up for work as the need arises. Offers of service may, if so desired, be limited strictly to harvesting operations and for a period not extending beyond September.

The current rate of wage for the class of work done will be paid. Workers transferred to other districts will have their railway fares paid.

Women and Children will not be transferred out of their own districts. Labourers already in the employment of farmers will not be transferred to other districts.

WHAT TO DO

Secure an Enrolment Form from the Director of National Service, 14 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin. Fill it up and post at once (no stamp required) to the Secretary of National Service at the above address.

Farmers are asked to employ Female labour where possible. By so doing Male labour may be set free for important work elsewhere.

We regret to announce the death of Captain George Quin, who has acted as manager and secretary of the Leopardstown Club since the inception of that racecourse in 1888. Captain Quin, who saw service with the 79th High-landers, at one time owned some useful horses, which he trained himself, and also had a few of General Sir Arthur Paget's in the stable. His colours met with a fair share of success, but some eleven years ago he retired from ownership, and devoted himself entirely to the work incidental to the management of the Leopardstown Club, which has proved such a successful concern. Shortly after taking on the direction of affairs at Foxrock he for a brief spell also held the position of Keeper of the Match Book, but, not finding the task a congenial one, resigned, and was followed in that office by the late Mr. Themas Brindley.

THE CONVENTION AND PROPORTIONAL REFRESENTATION.
TO THE ED. TOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.
Sir.—The approach of the meetings of the Constitutional Convention will renew public interest in the vital question of the electoral basis of a constituent assembly for Iraland. terest in the vital question of the electoral basis of a constituent assembly for Ireland.

As a somewhat prolonged interval in the activities of this Society has occurred since the outbreak of war, you will, perhaps, allow the Committee to remind your readers that the Government of Ireland Act was so amended, with the consent of all parties, as to provide for the ultimate election of the entire Semate and of members from Belfast, Dublin, and Cork to the Irish House of Commons by proportional representation.

Anon. C. R. Miss Carolan, Strand: Mr. Georgian, Mr. Georgian, Mr. Georgian, Mr. Georgian, Mr. Georgian,

COMING EVENTS. It is not unreasonable to hope that a much fuller application of the principle may now be secured if it can be made clear to the members of the Constitutional Convention that a preponderance of representative opinion is in favour of a system which will automatically secure a just measure of representation for all interests and classes. The Committee accordingly invite expressions of support, and will be happy to forward explanatory literature to those who may desire to be more fully informed of the operation and results of the system.

As an indication of recent progress it will in-operation and results of the system.

As an indication of recent progress it will interest your readers to learn that the Committee appointed to draw up rules for the new Russian Constituent Assembly has decided, by twenty-seven votes to uine, in favour of the proportional system.—Yours, etc.,

THE BALLYBUNION AFFRAY. was held concerning the death of Daniel Seanlon, when the coroner's jury, as a result of the evidence given before them, brought in a verdict of wiful murder against Constable Lyons and Sergeant Macaulay; and, if so, would he say what action the authorities had taken, or proposed to take, to give effect to the finding of the coroner's jury.

Mr. DUKE said that he had nothing to add to the answer he had given on the subject the previous day.

ENJOY HEALTH

If anything ails you that is disquieting set about getting the trouble removed, and so ensure an early return to your normal good health.

Dyspeptic disorders are responsible for most of the ailments which afflict us to-day. The pace and the strain of modern life tend to upset the digestive system. Yet after taking modern conditions into account and making due allowance for them, it is certain that many-perhaps the majority—of those who suffer habitually from derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels, might enjoy excellent and even robust

Beecham's Pills at the earliest sign of indisposition. When you first suspect your digestion to be deranged do not wait until the evil grows threatening, but at once take a reliable specific to remove it. Beecham's Pills have been proved, over and over again, to be admirable as a corrective medicine. Tired, over-worked and sluggish organs speedily respond to the beneficial influence of this remedy. To all who would enjoy health in full measure and be well all the time, their course is plain: it is to take a course of

The report of Mr. Churchill's Committee on the Promotion of Officers in the Special Reserve. New Armics, and Territorial Force was issued last night. These recommendations are that regimental officers granted acting rank below that of lieutenant-colonel on service should, when sick or wounded, retain such rank as long as they are at home, but should not be entitled to the pay of the acting rank unless filling the position at home for which such pay is allowed. Temporary lieutenant-colonels commanding battalions should be removed from the establishment of their units after four months sick leave, but should remain eligible for pay while unfit. Under the present conditions all officers should be provided with a small book containing a record of their services. All second lieutenants who have not previously been promoted to fill a vacancy in an establishment should, if duly recommended, be promoted to lieutenant after eighteen months' service. Two acting captains should be allowed to each battalion serving abroad in excess of the present authorised numbers. A corresponding increase should be allowed in other arms of the tervice. Exregular officers of the Reserve of Cificers should be allowed to reckon toward seniority all their previous service, less half he time during which they have been unemployed. Exregular officers on the retired list should be treated in the same manner, but less the whole time during which they have been unemployed. They should be eligible for promotion on the system applicable to officers of the Reserve of Officers, provided they join the Reserve, these rules to be retrospective for rank, but not for pay. Lieutenants of the Special Reserve should be linked for promotion to lieutenants of the corresponding regular arm in the service. Authority should be given for the appointment of officers to regular commissions in the minanty regiments supernumerary to the present establishments to the following extent:—Second lieutenants, 25 per cent. Corresponding increases should, be The Army Council, in a Note to the report.

If the recent crisis means anything, there are millions of Germans who will read that declaration with sinking hearts, knowing that the peace for which they long is never to be achieved on such VANS terms. We have before us to-day the first speech addressed to the Reichstag by Herr Michaelis, the new Imperial German Chancellor. It is a speech which leaves the present position of Germany open to no possible ambiguity. It implies that the immediate issue of the recent crisis has been a victory for Pan-Germanism in external affairs and reaction in domestic affairs. The circumstances in which the speech was delivered have to be taken into account in estimating its significance. The business before the Reichstag was the peace resolution approved, after much and Socialist Parties. It was a comprosite of the majority, representing the Centre, Liberal, and Socialist Parties. Unionists and Nationalists must take their share of responsibility for the existing conditions of unrest and lawlessness. The Government is partly to blame for the disaffection among teachers, since loyalty cannot be

Bathing.

The number of people who are non rushing off to bathe invites the reflection whether a sea bath is a habit, a distraction, or a cure. Most people would take the third view, for there is general faith in the good effects of salt water on the constitution. Accepted authorities have held that the real benefits to health are derived from leaving the sea water on the skin, or, rather, the salt in the pores of it. They add that the body should be dried in the sun, presumably to make the salt deposit on certain countries it is regarded as an inunequivocal definition of the fundamental vent this, in olden times bodies were issues. TONDON CORRESPONDENCE, FROM "THE TIMES" OF

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON, FRIDAY NIGHT. The news from the Russian front in Galicia to-day is most serious, for the refusal of a Russian regiment to fight compelled a general retirement, with consequent advantage to the enemy. Other regithey should obey their officers and attack, ultimately refusing to obey the military ommands. Russian situation will soon be hopeless, for the time suitable for fighting is fast will be safe for the winter. On the other hand, the news from Petrograd itself looks rather less alarming than did early in the week, and in quarters ly to be well informed pessimism reacting in Russia are almost inulable, but there are hopes that the Provisional Government is now strong enough to bring sufficient pressure to secure supplies of munitions for the armies in the field. It seems clear that Committee the committee of the has played a great part in the recent dis turbances, and that the Socialists who were allowed to return to Russia from Switzerland through Germany were in some cases German agents. In the meanwhile the Allies cannot help viewing the position in Russia with some anxiety.

The news from Germany makes it quite clear that the new Chancellor speaks with the voice of Hindenburg and the Crown war for Germany, but that all her methods of the voice of Hindenburg and the Crown Prince, and that the democracy of the country is not to be allowed to interfere in State matters. For a few days it seemed as though the German people would get direct representation, but that would get direct representation, but that the lapses blindly into his predecessor's fatal plea—the plea of necessity. More prudent than other eminent Germans from product that the democracy of the waging it, and in particular her use of submarines, are honourable and righteous. Then be lapses blindly into his predecessor's fatal plea—the plea of necessity. expectation must now be regarded as idle and unprofitable. Dr. Michaelis, instead, throws out a challenge to the democratic peoples, and it is unlikely that the Allied Governments will allow it to pass. In the ceurse of a few days we shall see how the German people will accept the new situation and in the meanwhile the Allies will assuredly deepen the conviction of the front, which our troops have defended with magnificent valour.

CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH. Herr Michaelis, says The Times, is too shrewd man to suppose for a moment that the Allies If this attitude develops, the tuation will soon be hopeless, are suitable for fighting is fast will listen to peace upon terms which would passing away, and the German position the one hand, to calm the growing demand in Germany for an attitude on the part of the Government which will make the termination of the war possible, and it is meant, at the same time, to assist the apostles of pacificism in Russia and other countries, who are so useful to her. But the real programme of the new Chancellor is to yield to none of the demands which the Allies regard as vital. That is manifest from the whole substance of his speech. He calls upon them to grant him a "German peace," military, diplomatic, and economic, and he threatens them with defeat if they refuse. He maintains, as totally as did Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg after he had recanted his first cynical confessions, that innocent and peaceful Germany was forced into war by the wicked aggression of her enemies, and he rehashes the familiar fictions about her efforts at Vienna to prevent it, without, of course, producing the corrrespondence between that capital and Berlin in the eventful days before the die was cast. etation must now be regarded as idle earlier in the war, Herr Michaelis refrains from to make greater preparations than to secure final victory.

THE NEW OFFENSIVE IN GALICIA. The new German Chancellor, Dr. Michaelis, delivered his first speech in the Reichstag on Thursday. Referring to peace, he said no new offer would be made. Submarine warfare, which, he said, had been forced on them by England's blockade, was doing all the destructive work that was expected of it. The war situation, the Chancellor said, was very good. The Anglo-French spring offensives had been shattered, and they had now started a new offensive in Trusting in God and in the German might, I have ventured to take it up, and I shall now serve the cause to the utmost of my power. I beg from you loyal co-operation in the spirit which has been so splendidly maintained in this body during the war. Bitter criticism has been passed upon an eminent man who occupied this post before me. This criticism has often been inspired by enmity and hate. I am under the impression that it would have been better if enmity and hate had paused behind closed doors. (Cheers.) Had I not believed firmly in the justice of our cause I would not have occupied office. We must keep before our eyes daily the events of three years ago, which are fixed in history, and show that we were forced into the war by Russia's secret mobilisation, which was the great danger for Germany. To have participated to the secret mobilisation, which was the great danger for Germany. To have participated to the secret mobilisation, which was the great danger for Germany. Russia's secret mobilisation, which was the great danger for Germany. To have participated in conference while the Russian mobilisation proceeded would have been political suicide. Although British statesmen knew, as is shown in their Blue Book, that the Russian mobilisation must lead to war with Germany, they addressed to lead to war with Germany, they addressed to word of warning against the military measures to the Russians, while my predecessor, in his message of July 29, 1914, to our Ambassader in Vienna, gave instructions to him to say that we would willingly fulfil our duty as an Ally, but that we must refuse to permit ourselves to be involved in the same of the success. Our failure is explained to a considerable degree by the fact that under the influence of the extremists, detachments having received command to support the attacked detachments held meetings and discussed the advisability of obeying the order, whereupon some regiments refused to obey the military command. The efforts of the commanders and the committee to arouse the men to the fulfilment of the con

the limits of your resolution as I interpret it. (Cheers.)

We cannot again offer peace. We have loyally stretched out our hand once, and met with no response. But with the entire nation, with me, the German Army and its leaders, in accord with this declaration—("Hear, hear," from Left and Centre)—the Government feels that if our enemies abandon their lust for conquest and their aims of subjugation, and wish to enter into negotiations, we shall listen honestly and ready for peace to what they have to say to us. Until then we must hold out calmiy.

AMERICAN INTERVENTION.

We look upon the optimistic feeling in the strength of the countries caused by America's intervention, without serious concern. (Renewed applause.) It is easy to recken how much tonnage is necessary to transport an army from America to the European Continent, and how much tonnage is required to feed, such an army. France and England are scarcely able to feed and supply their own Army without influencing their military and economic situation still more. After our previous successes we shall be able to master the new situation, too, through our fleet, particularly submarines. (Applause.) We and our Allies can, therefore look forward to any further developments of military events with caim security. (Renewed applause.)

THE BURNING QUESTION OF PEACE.
The burning question in our hearts is, however, how much longer is the war to last. With this we come to the matter which is the centre of all our interests and of all our proceedings to-day. Germany did not wish for war, and did not strive for the expansion of her power by violence. Therefore, she will not prosecute the war a single day longer after an honourable peace is obtainable merely to make conquests by violence. (Hear, hear, from the Scalists.)

What we wish is, first, to conclude a peace as those who would have successfully carried through their purpose. The present generation and coming generations should retain this time of war trials as a vivid memory, as a time of unprecedented sorrow, at execution, and willing sacrifices by our people and our armies for the centures to come. A nation of not seventy millions, which, side by side with its loyal Allies, took its place, weapon in hand, before the frontiers of its country against

This price will decrease month by month until, in January, it is settled at 60s. per cwt. It is hoped that the result will be a reduction before Christmas in the retail price of meat of 6d a pound. The Government is doing its obvious duty in endeavouring to bring meat down to a reasonable price. We trust, however, that the difficulties of the farmer will not be ignored. That mode of dealing with principal teachers was designed with the object of making the responsible position of a principal teacher in a large school an object of reasonable ambition on the part of national teachers, and encouraging them to break the bonds, and get out of this wretched system by which a man was tied down to indigence, and which bred discontent.

UNTRAINED TEACHERS.

The present salary of certain young, untrained women teachers was £24 a year, with a supplementary grant of £4, after they had given satisfying service. It was proposed that these untrained teachers should not be engaged at a salary of less than £40 a year, that they should be entitled to annual increments, which, at the end of the fifth year would come near a salary of £1 a week, and that when they retired, through marriage or illness, they should have a modest gratuity. There were a number of convent and monastery schools. Some of them were staffed by certificated teachers, who received the salarief of certificated teachers authorised by the department. Sometimes we look with horror upon the achievements of science when we witness the loss of life which is caused by new methods of destruction. We may look with no less horror upon the historians and ethnologists who have basely prostituted their learning in trying to prove that the race to which they belong is the dominating one. The author excels himself in his account of the peaceful penetration of Italy by Germany. He shows how the Church, Parliaments, and Press were influenced, bribed, subsidised, and, if need arose, ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. Dr. Ogg has had the good fortune to write a necessary book. He has conceived the happy idea of sketching the economic The natural cupidity, and the agnorance of international politics, of the development of modern Europe, which means virtually the Europe of the nineteenth century. As a matter of fact, he comes down to the outbreak of the war. This in itself is a great boon. Many books man chemist or engineer was subventioned, and thus was willing to work abroad for a trifling stipend until he had learned the bearing on the last three or four decades bring events to the outbreak of war in August, 1914, but extremely few of them furnish us with up-to-date statistics. Somesecrets of the processes of his competitors. By German methods of factory efficiency, thing seems to happen to the author, pre-venting him from being abreast of the latest information. Dr. Ogg gives the latest information on which he can lay hands. In a hundred pages he analyses the antecedents of the nineteenth century, superior organisation, and preferential transport rates accorded by the home railable to drive the native products out of German capital was judiciously invested with native capital, and later, when prosperity had crowned the enterprise, just as judiciously wishdrawn. The management always remained in German hands. "As the years passed," the author sums up. the great banks of Berlin, the black, white, and red lags of Germany, marking the deep inroads of German trade abroad, spread their network ever more broadly and thickly. The grandiose plan of the Pan-Germans for world-domination had found, in the material greed of the peoples of all nations, the pawns of their policy. The international character of world trade and commerce made it easy for the Germans to wear the cloak of a given nationality, which could be cast off at an opportune moment."

The share taken by Prince Bülow in weaving the Prussian spell over Italy is ably analysed. When he retired from the Chancellorship he took up his residence in Rome, and soon succeeded in forming a pro-German cotorie of Italians who were more German than the Germans them selves. and soon afterwards St. Omer was selected as their new headquarters. The great Jesuit College, capable of accomodating three hundred patients, with a real bed for each, was placed at their disposal. An enormous jute factory was offered by the Maire, and this was found to possess electric light, an expanse of clean cement floor, lavatories, and water-taps, so that work was made easier than it had ever been their lot before to find it. After five days spent in railway trucks the joy of a "free splash in buckets of water" may readily be imagined.

FOOD PRODUCTION, IRELAND, 1918

SERVICES AND ANT

Farm Implements and Machinery

for the Spring Tillage and Harvest of 1918 must be ordered without a day's delay. Last season difficulty was experienced in securing for Ireland a full supply of ordinary Farm Implements. By taking action now it will be possible to avoid similar trouble in 1918, and to ensure that the machines and implements will be at hand when required. The output for next season is being decided now by the manufacturers, who will make provision only for filling orders actually received.

Farmers must at once

make up their minds as to the Implements (both Tillage and Harvest) which they will require in 1918, and place their orders with local traders or through other usual channels.

Traders must Transmit Orders to the Manufacturers or Wholesale Agents not later than the 25th of this month

if they are to receive the necessary precedence. Orders sent in by that date and at the same time notified to the Department (on the forms which have been distributed for the purpose) will be specially watched to ensure as far as possible that they are filled. Those who delay ordering until after that date lay themselves open to disappointment.

FARMERS!

Order now from your usual suppliers

TRADERS!

Order without fail before the 25th July from the Manufacturers or Wholesale Agents, and do not forget to send to the Department at the same time details of your orders.

NELSON PILLAR TRAGEDY.

Witness—Three or four feet, up to here (shoulder beight).

Constable Patrick Reid deposed he was on duty at the Pillar at 2 pm. He heard a thud, and found the body of deceased lying on the Henry street side. On the body witness found, among other things, 4d, in eash, a war badge, and Army papers, showing that he had been discharged from the Royal Field Artillery in Sentember last on a temperary pension of 7/a week. Deceased had drawn his pension last on July 11th at Wolverhampton. The next payment was due in Dublin. Witness read the deceased's message to his wife. John O'Leary, railway porter, 19 Lower Dominick street, gave evidence of seeing the fall from the top of the Pillar to the street.

Dr. Dalv stated that death was due to fracture of the skull and spine, and other injuries, and must have been instantaneous.

A juror asked why deceased had been discharged from heapital when he was not cured.

The Coroner said there was no evidence as to that and they could only deal with the circumstances of death.

The Jury returned a verdict of suicide during temporary insanity.
